I am very proud to be associated with all the exciting work that is currently happening at Manor high School. Education is my passion. Effective learning can enhance life chances, personal happiness and social cohesion. I have been a Leader of Teaching and Learning in schools and colleges in East London and Leicester for over 25 years. I have worked as an Institute of Education PGCE mentor and a consultant for The Learning Trust. During a year away from teaching I worked with AQA examiners to design and run revision skills programmes for A Level students and teachers across the country. One of the many highlights of my career was running Duke of Edinburgh expeditions into the countryside for children from inner city London. I love football, playing the guitar and classic dystopian novels like '1984' and 'Brave New World'.

More recently I taught in a special school and completed an MSc in Psychology before becoming a SENCo. These insights help me challenge the team at Manor to strive for equality of opportunity for our young people. This is more likely to happen when they walk through the school gates feeling like their voice is heard, their needs are met and their aspirations are raised.
